As part of our investigation into whether retailers and manufacturers were complying with the new Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act, KQED and the Center for Environmental Health purchased 200 children's items from discount stores in California. Tests showed that about 1 in 6 items violate the new lead limits. The Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act bans the sale of items that have more than 600 parts per million of lead.					'XRF Test Results (in ppm)	Lab Results (in ppm)
